.. "excellent, easy-to-use, informative, and user-friendly guides."

Lawson Wood is an internationally known and award winning author and underwater photographer. Author of numerous dive guides, including those to the Cayman Islands and the Virgin Islands, Lawson is a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society and a founder of the Marine Conservation Society. He is based in Berwickshire, Scotland.

old book, old info, in bad shape.

A dive guide-book that does not tell you where the sites are! The maps are very generic, non-accurate, and they do not include any GPS co-ordinates for the sites. Here's a typical example of a Location: Northeast from Small Hope Bay, midway between Andros and New Providence. To put that in context, that is 26 square miles of ocean to search for the site! Do not waste your time.

Great guide

Good book for deciding which dive operator to use in New Providence, because the two main companies are on opposite sides of the island. Helped us realize that we wanted to divide our diving days between two operators to be sure to see all the good stuff. Also came in handy for filling out the dive logs after long days on the boat. The last few pages of the book are a short guide to fish identification. Pretty pictures and art-quality (not navigation-quality) maps.
