Synopsis

*** A First Time MM Romance *** After years of carrying his burden, he didn't think things could get any worse. When you hit the rock bottom, there was only one way to go, right? But his bottom didn't seem to be a rock one. It was muddy and he was clearly stuck in the mud with no way to dig himself out. He groaned as he pressed his wrist to his forehead. Not only has he probably lost a good friend tonight but he came out of the closet in the worst possible manner. What the hell was he thinking trying to kiss Bryan? He instantly realized the problem as he wasn't thinking. He allowed the bottled-up emotion to overpower him. He couldn't even explain to himself what made it seem like a good idea at the time. He and Bryan were sat so close and sharing things that made their emotional connection closer too. Matt has never felt that close with anyone, not even Jen. He never shared his fears and insecurities with her, with Bryan, he bared his soul and there wasn't a trace of judgement from him. "Apparently, I exposed a little too much," he muttered to himself. It was way too soon for him to tell Bryan he was gay. They might have felt close but they have only known each other for less than a fortnight. He should have waited, maybe a few weeks, or months, or years or even better eternity. He felt as if everything fell into ruin. Even if Bryan didn't decide to pack his bags and move out, the comfortable friendship that was forming between them would crumble, nothing would be the same again. Everything they were working towards was flushed in one swift moment of his idiocy. Matt glanced at his phone as it began to ring again, he could barely resist answering it just to hear Bryan's voice, regardless of what he was going to say but the fear paralyzed him. He knew he was acting like a sulky teenager but the only thing he could think of doing was switching the device off. Once again, his car fell silent.
